WELCOME

Self-education, inexhaustible energy!

Self-education is defined as the individual's acquisition of information, skills, and experiences independently of any educational institution and by the individual's dependence on himself.

Self-education has emerged to keep pace with all events and developments by all standards, and self-education reflects the great importance of keeping pace with the continuous openness of knowledge taking place in the world.

Self-education aims to learn skills and acquire knowledge with the least effort. Self-education also has a role to ensure the effective participation of the individual during the learning process. Self-education provides feedback to the individual, which contributes to improving the learner's performance directly.

Finally, self-education allows the individual to get the opportunity to discover his talents and the areas in which he excels.
